In the first room a piece of accipture by Annette St. Gaudens has a place so prominent that the subject of the work, "Salvation," seems to bear a direct relation upon the beatitudes of the women who used to find it difficult to fill the small Arlington Gallery on Madison avenue and now find it twice as difficult

Miss St Gaudens's relief, which a century ago, had this artist flourished then, would have been a simple "Recentrection," with promises of peace in the life hereafter, shows a modern Christ who seems to be assuring us, if all the legends that are part of the decorative where may be believed, instant and manifold comforts in our present existence. He seems to be shattering our disbeliefs upon such subjects as sex equality, hereditary privilege, drink, poverty, and the like, but gives us no assurance whatever in regard to the pros-

GOUNOD'S 'MIREILLE' BEAUTY, HUMOR AND THRILLS IN MOVIES

Goundd's "Mireille," unheard here in Attractive Offerings Given at generation and the minth of General Rialto, Strand, Rivoli and "noveities and revivals" of the current spera season, will be given for the first linie in the Metropolitan Opera House on Friday evening. February 28.

The libretto-three acts and five scenes—is an adaptation by Carre, one of the librettiers of the superspera the Broadway.

SPY PLOT NOT NEGLECTED

"Faust," of the dramatic poem
"Mireio" by the famous Provencal poet
Frederic Mistral, who in sending his Alice Joyce and Mae Murray Among the Contributors to Film Scenes.

wrote:
"I dedicate to you 'Mirefile.' It is my heart—my soul! It is the flower of my years! It is a grape from the plain of Crau (a district in southern France), which with all its foliage a peasant offers you!"

At 'Mr. Gatti-Cassua's request the eminent barytone Victor Maurel, a Provencial by birth and a painter as well cheerfully while "The Lion and the Provenced by birth and a painter as well as operatic artist, designed the accentry and contumes for the Metropolitan production. The accentry has been painted by Pieretto Bianco and James Fox.

The opera has been prepared musically under the supervision of Piere Monteux, who will conduct it, aided by Giulio Setti, chorus master, and Richard which the play is only a fringe, like a river that is different at every moment marvelous in every mood, never twice alike even in its most fleeting phases. The plot is an unusually suitable one for the screen. A girl's father is at the mercy of those who would destroy him. The same situation is held from begin-ning to end. Now and then it is brought Another event is the bridge party for the benefit of St. Agnes Hospital, which will take place Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Loesch, Miss Char-lotto Meir, R. A. Shepard and H. K. Hays, all of Philadelphia, were over Sunday guests of Miss Mary Allison at Gedney Farm Hotel.

The Rev. and Mrs. George William Douglass of New York are at Gedney for Patch," Which also enjoyed considera-Patch," which also enjoyed considerable success on the stage. Marguerite Clark has the role of that classic favor-ite. Lovey Mary. The story, in its second decantation, still follows the origin book with sufficient fidelity, preserving its pleasing sentiment and homely humor, and is not devoid of dramatic touches. Douglas of New York are at Gedney for Thriller at the Rivolt. Arrivals for over Sunday included Mrs. A. Debuy and daughters. Mrs. L. Stuart Wing, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Taus-sig, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Eberling, Mr and Mrs. George J. Corbett, Mrs. H. M. Corbett, Dr. and Mrs. L. S. Sherer, Mrs.

A rattling thriller by Joseph Louis Vance flashes its high lights from the screen of the Rivoli. This is "False Paces." Excitement is provided for every minute that the tale occupies in unfolding its five reis. Battles, spy hunts, conspiracies, perils by sea and land, are telescoped together in a breathcharacter, who has become a secr agent of the Allies and has set hims eath of his wife and child.

Mae Murray, a charming little screen star, appears in "The Scarlet Shadow" at the Broadway. The theme of the play is the dangers of a puritanical bringing up for a young girl about to enter the world. In this picture Miss Murray justifies her reputation for popularity. The story is an interesting one and has an unusual ending.

PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.

Powell In Soloist. The Philharmonic Society gave an all

The Philharmonic Society gave an all American programme at its regular Sunday afternoon concert yesterday in Carnegie Hall. John Powell was the soloist. The list of compenitions offered comprised Henry K. Hadley's overture "In Bohemia," MacDowell's "Indian" suite No. 2, Chadwick's symphonic ballade "Tam o' Shanter," Powell's "Rhapsodie Negre," for plano and orchestra, and in closing, Rubin Goldmark's Gettyaburg "Requiem" for orchestra.

ranged and it was heard with an apparently deep interest throughout. The more recently written works came after the intermission. Mr. Chadwick's fine "Tam o' Shanter" ballade was first performed under the composer's baton of June 3, 1915, at a Norfolk festival, is dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Ca Stoeckel, the founders of the festival.

his 'Rhapsodie Negre." He first played it here last March at a Russian Symphony concert. Rich in characteristic negre themse which the composer, seconding to a note, has attempted to synthesiae "In the form of organic unity," the work is brilliantly scored. Mr. Powell performed the soic part with brilliant effect and he was well supported by the orchestra in the difficult accompaniment. At the close Mr. Powell was recalled to the platform several times.

Mr. Goldmark's dignified and ably composed "Requiem," which was written in commemoration of Lincoln's famous speech at Gettysburg, had teen beard recently at a Philharmonic concert for the first time. It served exceptly yesterday as the closing number in the programme.
